- 11 a.m. Going south were six horsecarts each loaded with about six large bags² of grain. Each cart was driven by an unarmed CCF.
- 3 p.m. One horse cart loaded with about 20 bags, apparently of flour, and three horse carts, each loaded with about 15 rectangular boxes, proceeded south. Each cart was driven by an unarmed CCF.
- 5:10 p.m. Four CCF on horseback in single file, followed by about 300 CCF in a column of two went south. The mounted men wore pistols and the foot troops carried either 7.7-mm. rifles, Type 99 (Japan), PPSH-41 (Soviet), or 7.62-mm. Soviet ~~submachine guns~~. The majority of the rifles were Japanese. None of the troops carried packs, blanket rolls, or ammunition belts. Neither supply carts nor vehicles accompanied them.
3. In the valley at CT-829548 was a rifle range with five wooden targets each 1.5 meters wide and 1.7 meters high, spaced at five-meter intervals. On each target were 10 concentric rings numbered from one to ten in Chinese characters. At CT-840542 were five triangular shelters, with thatched roofs which extended to the ground, each capable of housing about six men. About 120 CCF were observed scattered around the area.
4. On 3 February in the valley at CT-856615 there were about 50 shelters ranging in size from about 16 x 16 feet to the size of a United States squad tent. Soldiers were observed taking food out of about five of the shelters. On 3 February about 600 to 700 unarmed CCF were observed in the valley and in the village of Kalbang-dong (CT-857615). In the village were nine mud houses with thatched roofs. Six or seven men civilians were seen in the company of the CCF. No cattle or other stock were observed. Apparently in celebration of the lunar calendar New Year, the CCF were decorating a pine arch where two roads meet at CT-851615. At the arch were six flags including one North Korean flag. The others were red with five light-colored stars partially encircling a symbol in the upper right hand corner. One armed CCF was on guard at the arch. There was no enclosure around the camp, or any vehicles observed in the area.
5. On 4 February eight bunkers were observed at CT-839629, and about 50 unarmed CCF were in the immediate area. Five meters east of the bunkers were four vehicle shelters facing southeast, each containing one truck which from the front appeared to be a GAZ-51.
6. A checkpoint with three CCF armed with rifles was at a small wooden hut on the south side of a vehicular bridge at CT-840622, south of Ch'angdo-ri (CT-843623). The bridge had formerly been concrete, but had been rebuilt with timber. On the north side of the bridge was a by-pass across the stream built of straw bags. On 4 February the following traffic was observed crossing the bridge:

TimeTraffic Observed

TimeTraffic Observed

- 5:30 p.m. Five CCF, two armed with PPS-1943 submachine guns and three unarmed, were transporting southward two artillery pieces, each drawn by a three-horse team. The artillery pieces were designed like the 105-mm. howitzer, Type 91 (Japan), but they had a 76-mm. barrel.
- 6:30 p.m. Eleven GAZ-51 trucks each loaded with a number of bags of grain went south.
7. The houses in the village of Ch'angdc-ri were uninhabitable, but there were no signs of reconstruction. No civilians were observed in the village. The rail-road between CT-842623 and CT-853638 was intact, but there was heavy rust on the rails. From CT-853638 northward for an unknown distance the rails and ties had been removed.
8. On 4 February at CT-851637 was a wooden road sign 40 centimeters long and 25 centimeters wide, pointing south, on which was written in Chinese characters the number "58". On the ground about 15 meters north of the sign were seven empty drums smelling of gasoline and shaped like the United States 55-gallon drum. They were a very light, olive drab color. On two of the drums were written the characters for Canton (1684/2639) underneath which were three lines of groups of words.³ The other five had the lines of writing but no characters. In the early evening a GAZ-67 cargo truck with four CCF going south stopped at CT-852659. [redacted] Later another GAZ-67 truck headed north stopped. In the vehicle were five North Korean army soldiers in winter uniforms. [redacted]
9. On 5 February between 700 and 800 CCF were training on a field at CT-855645. Equipment consisted of 6 x 82-mm. mortars, 6 x 7.62-mm. Maxim heavy machine guns on wooden wheels, and a number of rifles. The heavy weapons were placed in the open facing Hill 418 (CT-846652) and during the morning the troops moved in small tactical groups on the hill. There was no firing during the period. At noon the CCF returned to their camp which was composed of a number of thatched-roofed shelters of various sizes, the largest being about the size of a United States squad tent.
